UNHRC videos

illustrator | Storyboard Artist

A series of three animated videos commissioned by the United Nations Human Rights Council (UNHRC) to support trials addressing war crimes committed in Syria, with a focus on prison torture. The videos were based on anonymized testimonies, which were transformed into scripts, developed into storyboards, and then turned into black-and-white illustrations. These illustrations were later animated in Parallax 2.5D Animation style.

 cartoon show
Character design | Background design | Storyboard Artist

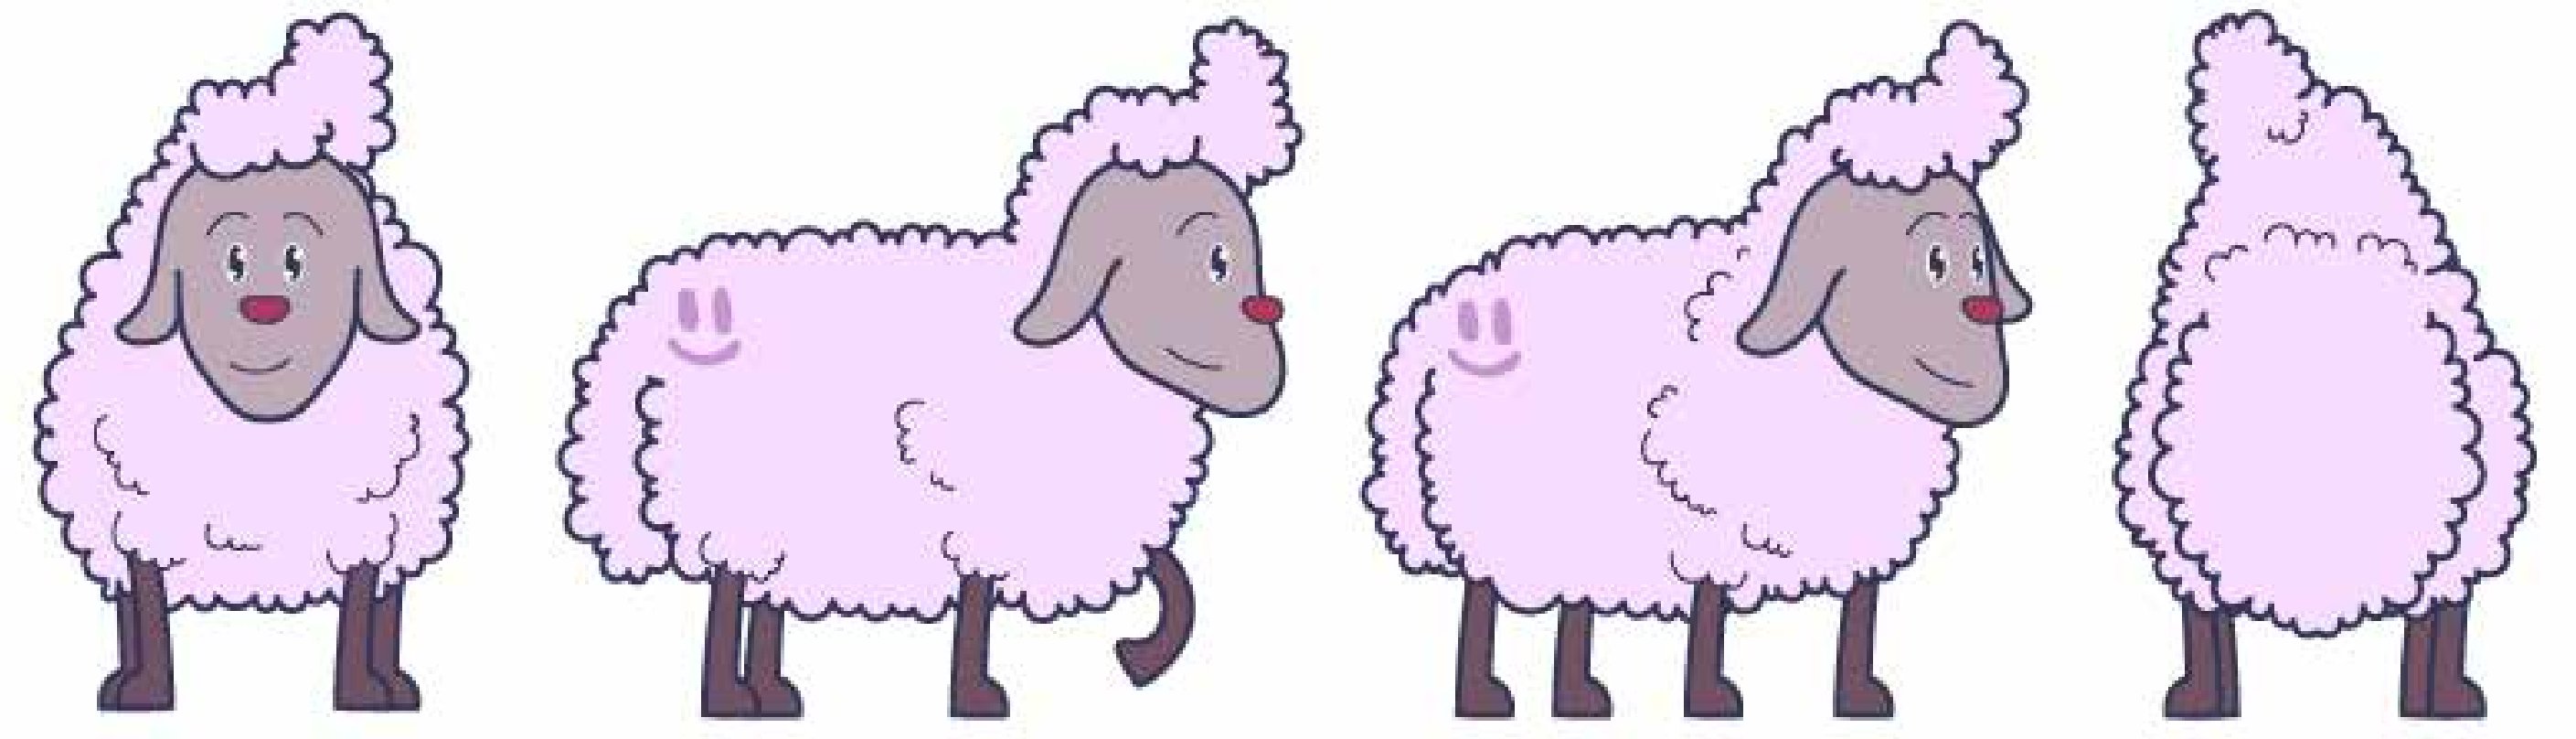

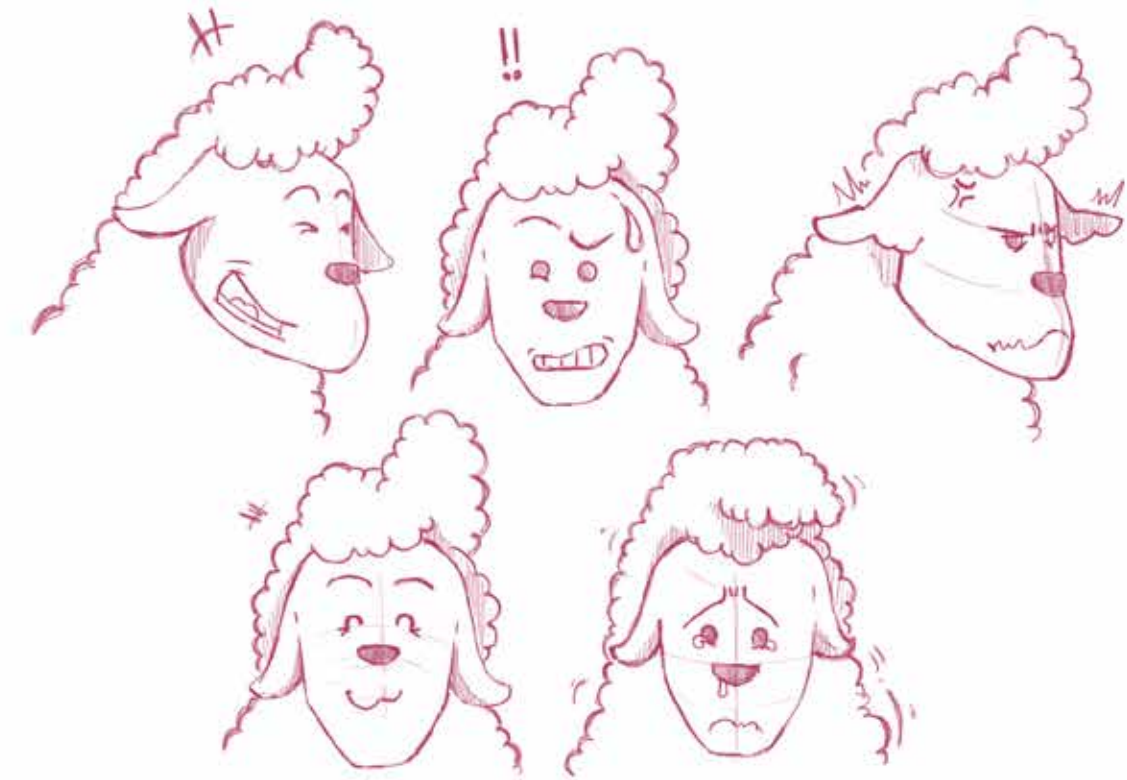

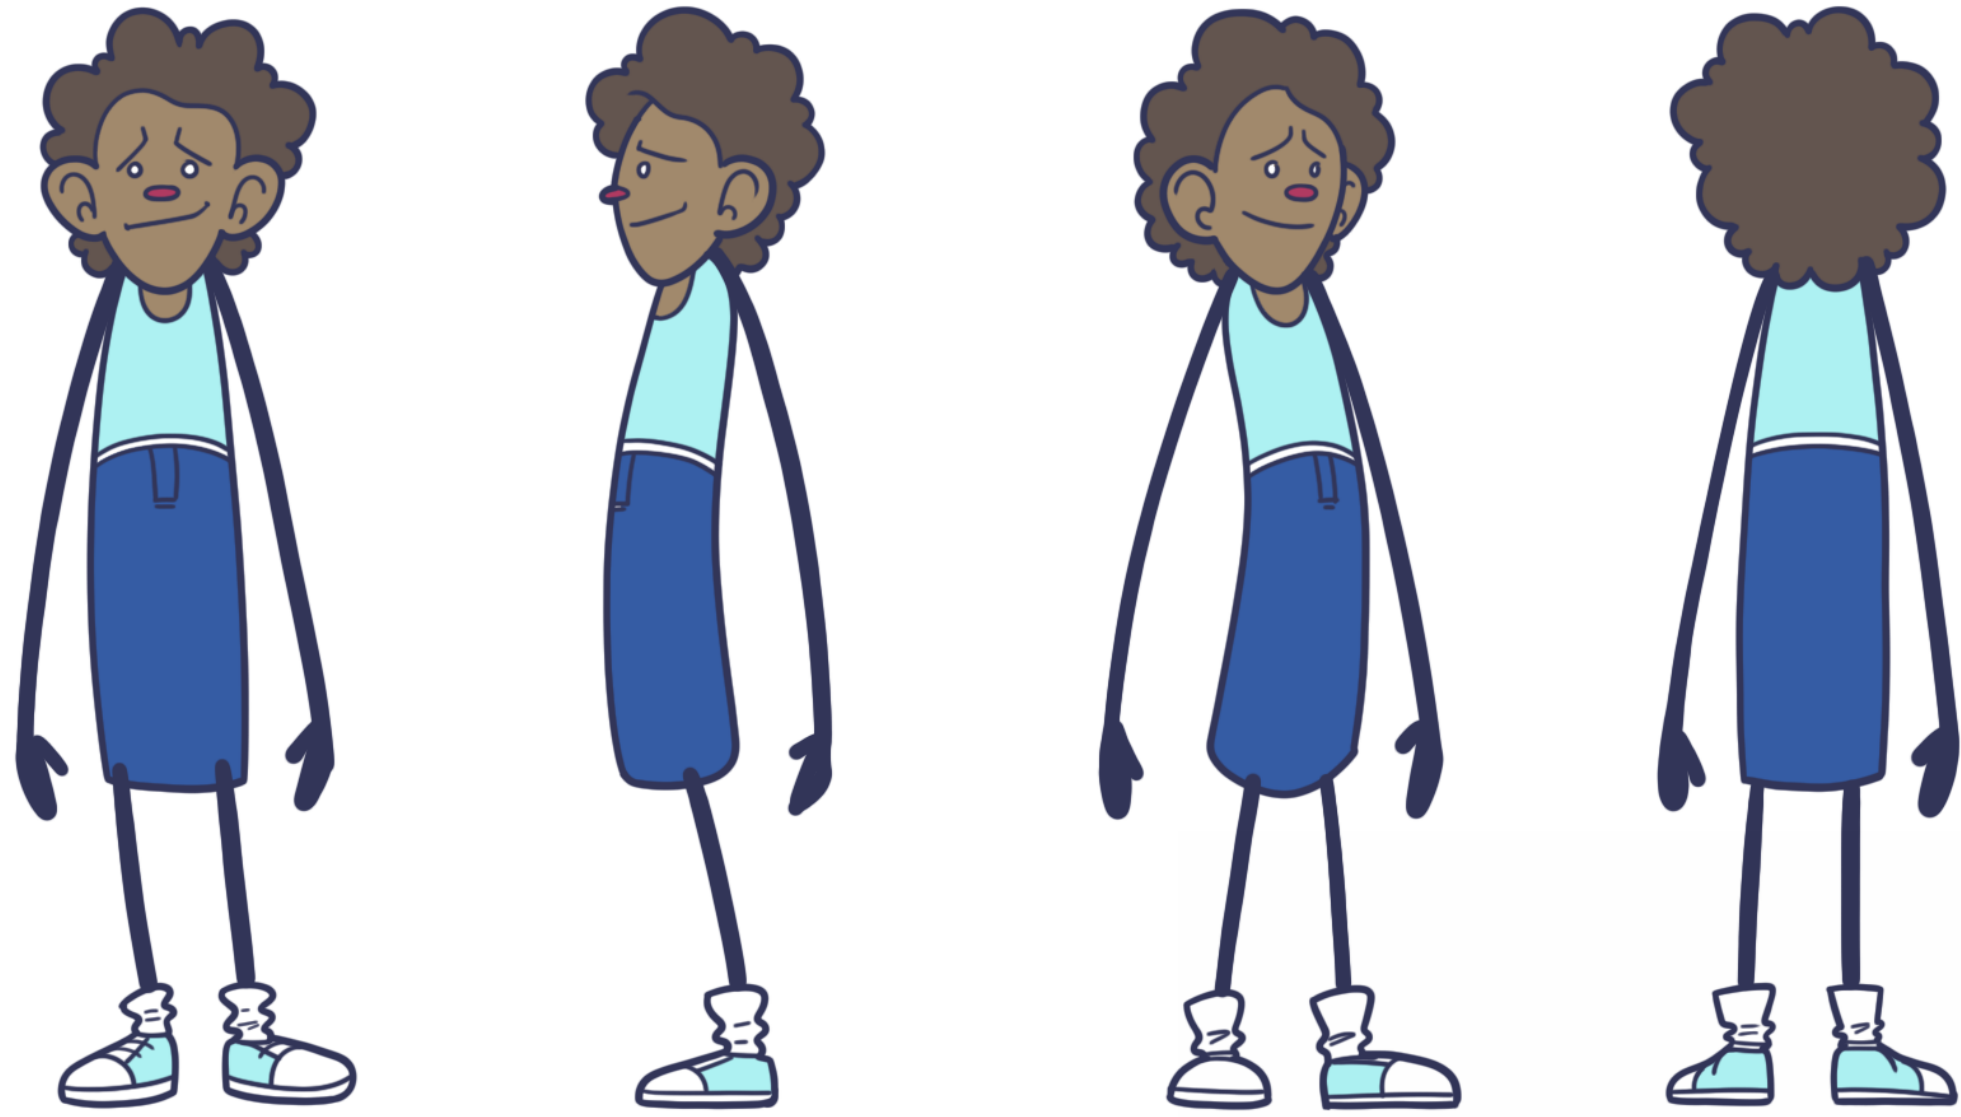

The show is a domestic production that required knowledge and research into the aesthetics of a specific Syrian region. This included the architecture, interior design, and traditional attire unique to the area.

The story revolves around three main characters and their adventures, aiming to challenge stereotypical views about this particular community and region in Syria.

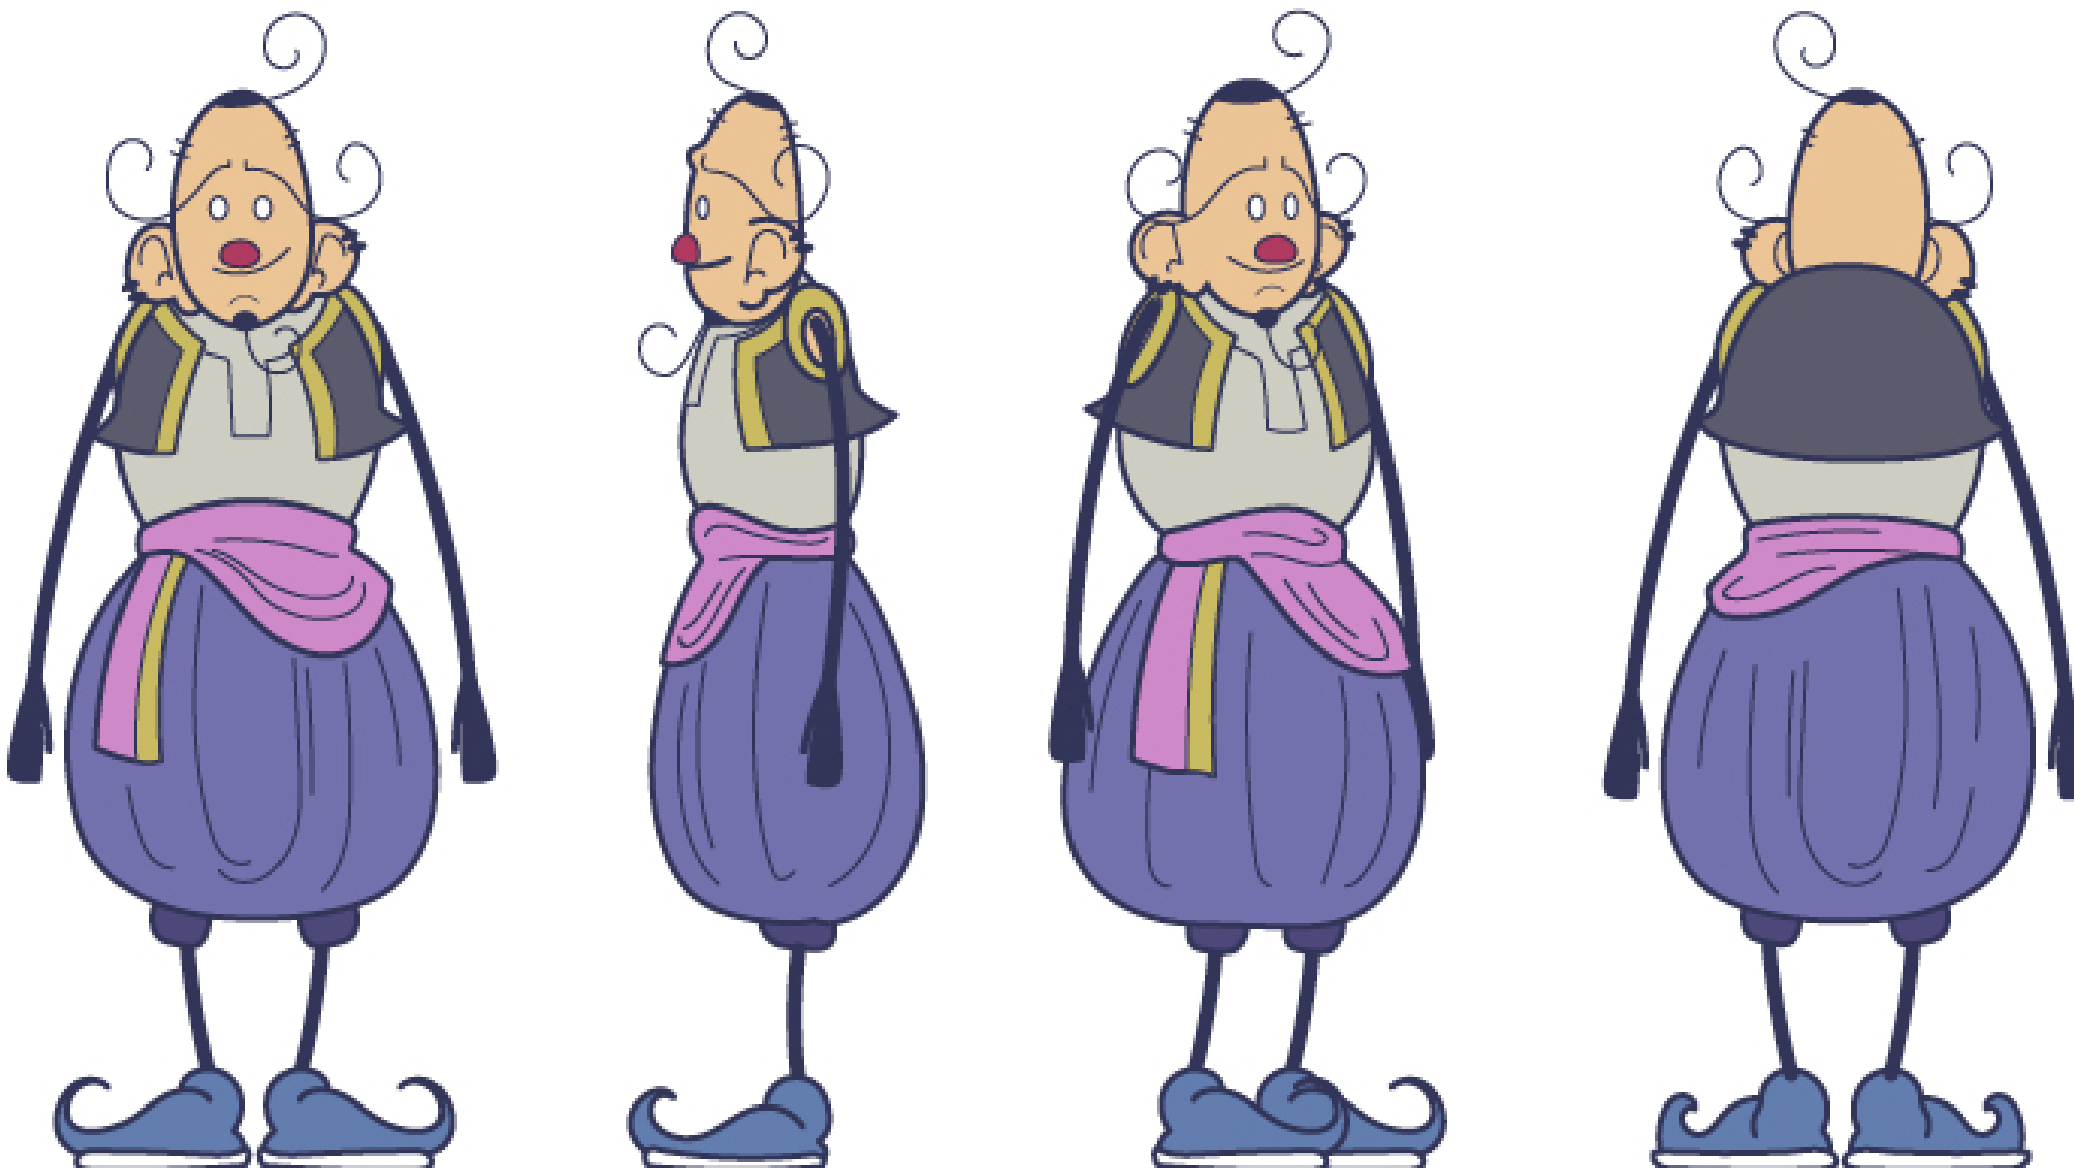

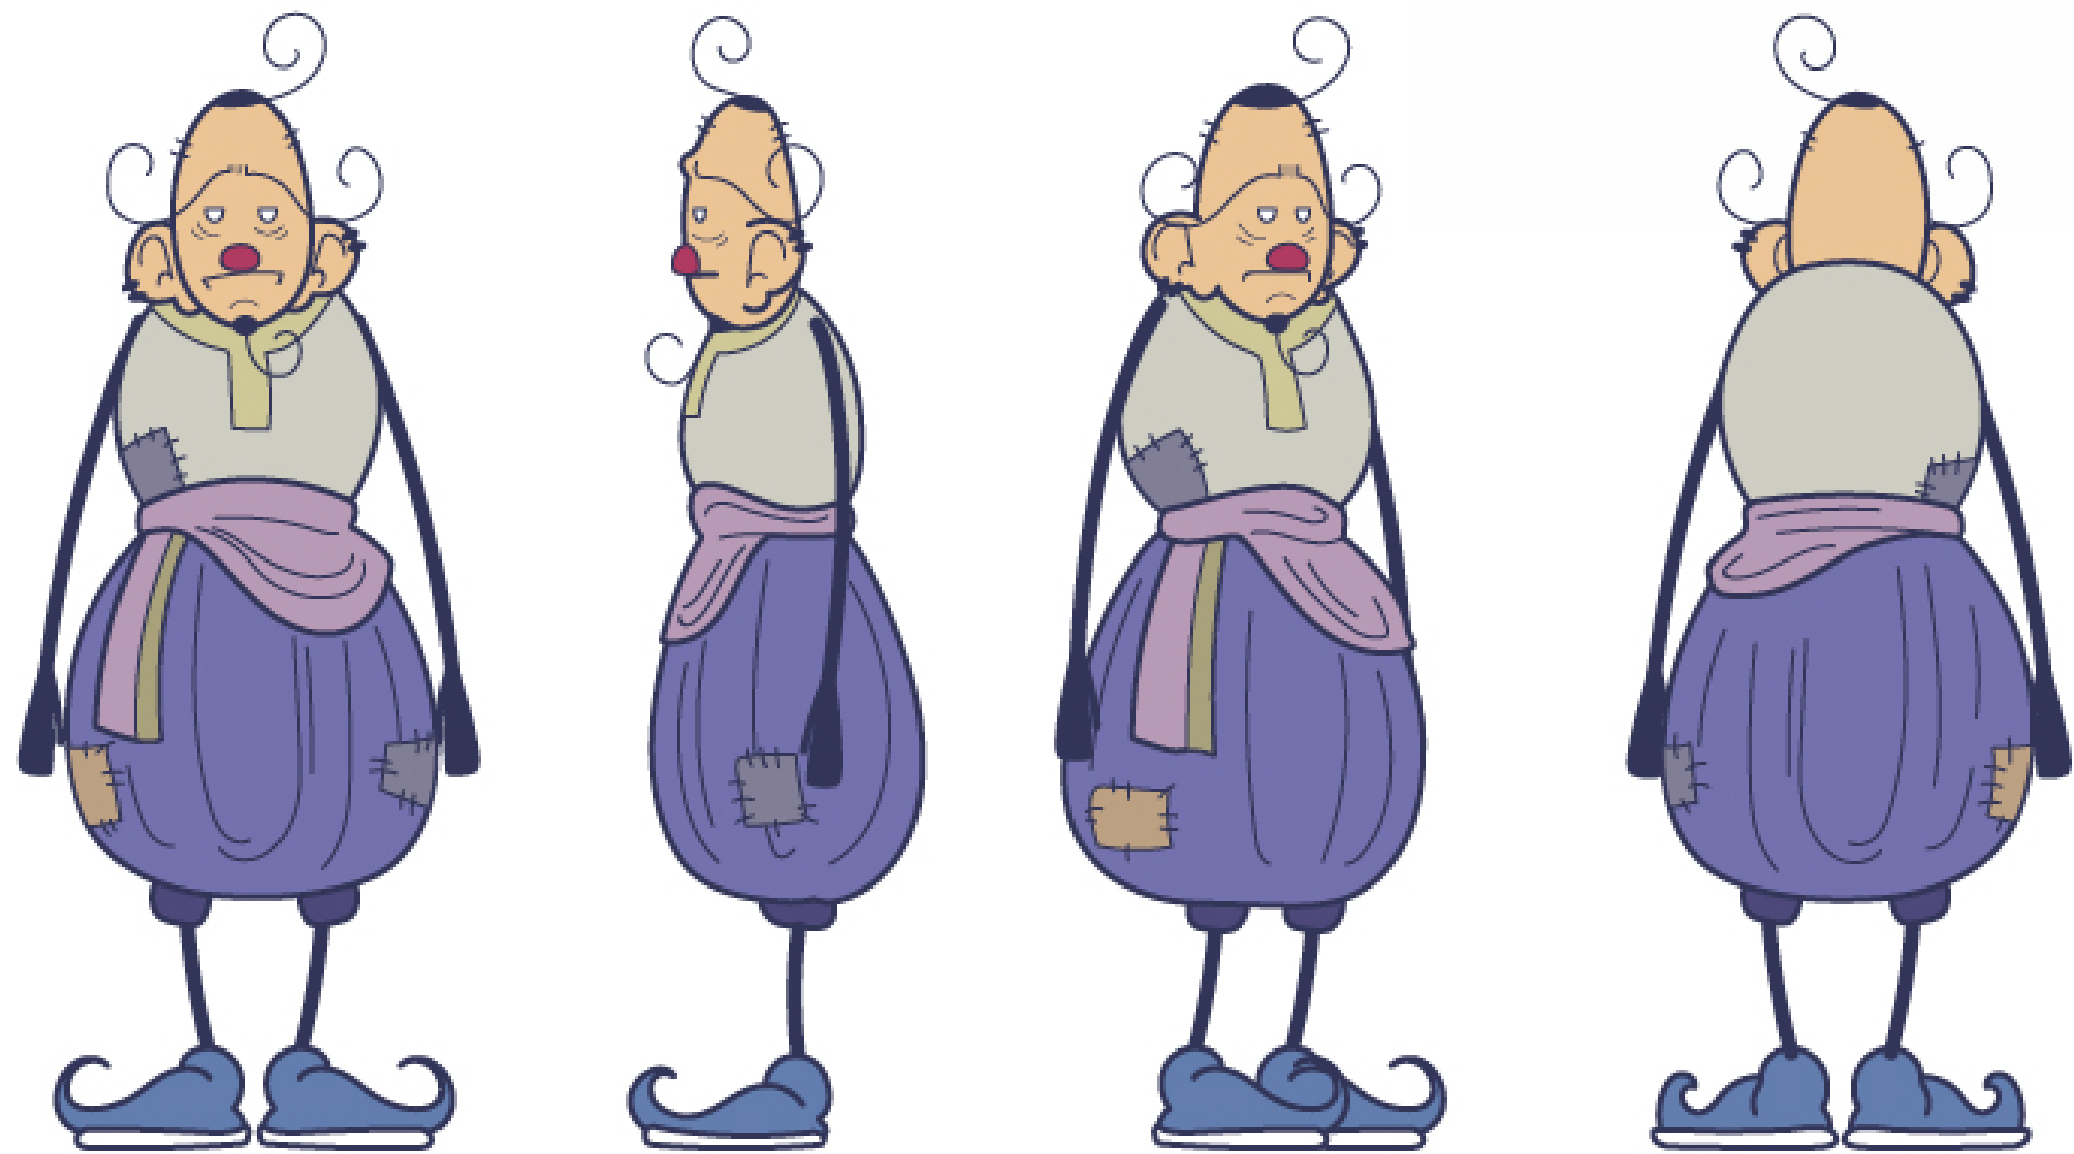

To streamline production and reduce costs, the characters were designed in a specific style, particularly in the style of their limbs and necks, to make the animation process more efficient.
